
the way you live without gender is you look for where gender is,
and then you go someplace else.

- kate bornstein

come to:

“(trans)gender”

open to everyone and anyone who is straight or straight-edge, queer or peculiar, curious, bi-curious or bisexual, lesbian or thespian, gay or gleeful, differently abled or differently gendered, religious or raucous, questioning or question-free, closeted or closet-bound, rightist or right-handed, clueless, toothless or label-less, leftist or left-handed, out or outspoken, polygamous or polyglot, asexual or apolitical, none of the above, all of the above or anything else.